

NORTH WEST UPDATE 2011 PROGRAMME

Place Making and Design in Leeds

Wednesday 11 May 2011

Rose Bowl, Leeds Metropolitan University

Quality of place has never been more important; whilst the planning system enters a period of confusion and uncertainty it is essential that planners understand the principles of good design and what can be achieved through the tools and techniques available. In recent years Leeds has undergone significant change; it provides an excellent location for exploration into the application of placemaking practices. This event will offer an introduction to, and update of, best practice and some of the tools available to support those working to meet aspirations and expectations in the delivery of urban design quality in a range of differing environments. A walking tour of the city centre will enable delegates to see recent key projects in their context.
