ENERGY: THE PLANNERS' ROLE IN CONSERVATION AND GENERATION

A One-Day Conference being held on TUESDAY 28 APRIL 2009
In the ATHENAEUM, ANGEL HILL,
BURY ST EDMUNDS, SUFFOLK, IP33 1LU

In economic and environmental terms, conservation of energy is as important as how and where energy is generated. Fossil fuels are a finite resource and this country is increasingly reliant on imported supplies.

Conserving energy, reducing demand and generating energy from non-fossil fuels are now a necessity. Planning and Planners will play a pivotal role in achieving these aims. Planning policies can play a large part in reducing energy consumption, and the increasing diversity of energy generation plants will require an increased awareness of the advantages and disadvantages of the various methods and the fuels they employ. Building design will move away from the traditional forms and materials which will increase the demands on the skills of development control and conservation officers. Are you ready for the challenge? Are you well informed on the crucial issues?

This Conference will help provide development control, conservation, planning policy and waste disposal officers with the knowledge you need to make informed decisions on the future of energy conservation and generation.
