Local authority direct delivery of housing Round 3 research

Desk survey 2021 Report

Executive Summary

This report is the first part of the 2021 research on local authorities' direct provision of housing. It has used the same methodology as in 2017 and 2019.<sup>1</sup> In this desk survey research, we have found that the number of local authorities with companies which could support the provision of housing has increased from 78% to 83% in 2019 and 59% in 2017. 72% of councils have a JV in comparison with 57% in 2019 (no assessment was made in 2017). This survey shows that 80% of local authorities have indicated a need to provide affordable housing in their Corporate Strategies, an issue which the forthcoming final report will show has been exacerbated in the pandemic. The report demonstrates some of the differences in provision between London and the rest of England. Finally, the report illustrates, through its tables, the range of mechanism and means being used by local authorities to deliver housing to meet local needs in their areas including the HRA, companies, JVs, partnerships, regeneration and community land trusts. This research will be further discussed as part of the report on the rest of the 2021 research which includes a direct survey, round tables and case studies.

The Desk Survey

Introduction

This desk survey is part of the third round of research that has been undertaken into the ways in which councils are directly engaging in the delivery of housing. Each round of research – in 2017, 2019 and 2021 – has been undertaken using the same methodology although in each round specific questions have been examined. In 2021, we have investigated a range of additional issues in the desk survey including the name of local authority companies, specific JV and partners and the numbers of homes being built where this information is online. The details of housing numbers have not been aggregated for each council as some are targets so should be seen more as a mosaic that is helping to compile a more complete picture although may gaps remain. We have also reviewed all council corporate plans and strategies for mentions of any priority for affordable housing and also reviewed where councils are working with community land trusts. The information that has been found for each council is listed on the table below. Before this there is some analysis of specific issues that emerged through this survey and, in the appendices, we have included lists of these councils engaged in specific types of initiatives discussed below. As this is a survey based on web sources alone, then inevitably, some information about council activity will not be in the table and some may have been overtaken by events. The web links can be accessed in the table to support what has been identified. Overall, the information has been very difficult to find and sometimes has required multiple searches.

One conclusion of this desk survey is that councils are not identifying their levels and outcomes of housing delivery activity in one place. The information about the HRA, housing companies and RP partnerships is more difficult to find than the numbers of homes being provided though JVs on the whole. There is also a major gap between the discussion and information provided by councils on their delivery through housing and planning departments and that provided through regeneration, even where the council is contributing land and finance in addition to masterplanning and advocacy.

Methodology

The methodology used to undertake this desk survey has been the same as in 2017 and 2019. Each council was searched using the same terms on Google. In 2021, the desk research was undertaken between January and April and new search terms were added to those undertaken before which were primarily concerned with whether the council had a company or a joint venture. In 2021, each council was also searched for the following:

- Whether the council's corporate plan or strategy included their need to provide affordable housing – those councils that did mention the need for affordable housing have the link to this strategy included here. Those not mentioned either did not have any mention of affordable housing in their corporate strategy or plan or did not have one;
- The Council HRA business plan or equivalent where the council has an HRA;

- Where the council has a company or a JV, the name of the company and/or the JV partners have been identified and included as far as possible;
- The Council regeneration programmes that include housing – here the council may have a JV, some land ownership, or using advocacy to seek funding from government or its agencies for delivery;
- The number of homes that the council appeared to be directly involved in delivering through their HRA, company, a JV, partnerships with RPs, their own RP or regeneration programmes. These are shown as separate figures and not aggregated in the table; there has been an effort to avoid double counting as far as possible; the source of these figures will be in the weblinks provided; they should be regarded as a mosaic;
- The Council's investment strategy;
- The Council's commercialisation strategy; and
- Whether the council works with a community land trust

The information found and included on the table is the result of the best efforts exercised in the process. It must be noted that the information is generally hard to find and piece together. Where there are opportunities to bring together the council's approach to housing delivery, for example in the corporate plan, housing strategy or delivery plan, these omit much of the housing activity that councils are engaged upon. It is easy to find HRA new build budgets but not the associated capital programmes in many cases. Where councils have engaged in delivery with partners – JVs or RPs, councils do not appear to be 'claiming' this delivery although it is due to its direct investment in time, land, funding or advocacy.

Findings

In this section the findings are summarised under a range of issues. In the forthcoming final report for our research in 2021, these will be set within the wider findings of the changes in housing policy and practice since 2019 and the other parts of the research including the direct survey, the round tables and the case studies.

Companies

In comparison with 2017 and 2019, the number of councils with companies has increased from 58% in 2017, 78% in 2019 to 83% in 2021. Within these figures, there is an amount of churn with council companies, opening, closing and re-opening. With the exception of a few cases such as Merton, there is not always much detail of why these companies have been closed. Where councils are not engaging in much delivery, there is no discussion as to why this is the case and these councils frequently rely on planning mechanisms for delivery of all types of housing including affordable of various types. Some councils have strong relationship with RPs, providing a development budget or specific partnership arrangements.

This increase in the number of council companies may relate to the increasing use of JVs to deliver housing and this has increased from 57% in 2019 to 72% in 2021 (the figures were not collected in 2017). Some councils have multiple JV arrangements for housing delivery, and these appear to be focused on specific sites or locations. In the past, more JVs appear to have been established with a more general agreement to find development opportunities jointly, but the JV focus has narrowed in these cases to a specific number of identified sites. Some councils have construction contracts with developers, but these appear to be more traditional in their arrangements and not JVs.

Where councils have companies, they are being used for a range of purposes including development, housing management, taking s106 properties or purchasing street properties for rent. Some councils have a range of companies for different purposes such as Epping, South Cambridgeshire, Bath and NE Somerset, Gateshead and Hounslow. There has been an expansion on councils using this trading company approach in comparison with previous years. Of the new companies, some have been established to undertake specific types of development or acquisition of housing for rent. Others have opened companies to support the development of their own land.

A number of councils have closed down their companies – such as Liverpool City Council and Merton – the latter in response to concerns about the issues at Croydon Council and its Brick by Brick housing company. Other councils have closed down their companies to concentrate on other approaches such as the HRA, not least since the debt cap has been removed in 2018. Others have been closed as a result of new political or officer leadership.

Joint ventures

There has been a significant increase in councils with joint ventures since 2019 (these were not calculated in 2017) from 57% to 72% of councils with at least one JV. Some councils like Oxford City Council, BCP and Brighton and Hove have multiple JVs. In the past some councils had JVs with private sector partners without specifically agreeing the sites or projects to be worked on. The trend now appears to be that councils will specify sites or projects to be the purpose of the JV. Some JV partners appear more frequently than others including Keepmoat, MUSE, Countryside properties, Morgan Sindall, Barnfield and L&Q. There are also individual JVs with local partners. The names of the JVs and partners are included within the table where it has been possible to find them and there are accompanying weblinks in the table with information on numbers of homes where these are provided. JVs may more frequently be used for major estate and economic regeneration projects.

The desk survey does not investigate why councils have taken on these JV partners but from the material online it appears to be because of a wish to share the risk, inject more investment into a project or provide more experience than the council may have. From the JV partner point of view, it provides access to guaranteed projects for a given period of time. Some councils have JVs with other councils or their companies such as SCAPE (Nottinghamshire CC) or Norse (Norfolk CC) while Nottingham City Council has a development company arm, Blueprint, which invests in other council areas. Homes England is also a JV partner in some councils.

Affordable housing

In the 2021 desk survey, there has been an attempt to understand in more detail what priority that local authorities are providing for the provision of affordable housing. While the Government's definition of affordable housing comprises a range of sub-market types of housing including shared ownership, in general public discourse this is assumed to be housing provided at a lower social or income related rent. The planning system does not support the provision of affordable housing through the allocation of sites for this specific type of need. Rather, it requires councils to undertake some assessment of housing need as a basis for negotiation of the provision of affordable housing through development contributions. Affordable housing is also excluded from funding through CIL contributions. It is then left to local authorities to negotiate a percentage of affordable housing in schemes on a range of sizes. As the information extracted from council websites demonstrates, the percentage achieved across different local authorities varies although this study has not been focused on identifying the percentages for each council. In a minority of local authorities, the provision of affordable housing is entirely dependent on this method of provision. In previous research in 2017 and 2019, one of the motivations of local authorities directly engaging in housing provision has been to meet this shortfall between local housing need requirements and provision. The full report on the research will identify whether this remains the case in 2021. However, the discussions in the research round tables and case studies suggests that the pandemic has heightened the awareness of councils of the need to provide affordable housing at submarket rents for a range of their citizens. Local authorities are also indicating that their council housing registers have grown beyond the usual trends 2020-2021.

As well as this 2021 survey considering the delivery of affordable housing through direct or supported means – where the council provides some funding to housing association for example – there has also been a wider review of the priority which local authorities are assigning to the provision of affordable housing at the corporate level. All local authorities apart from county councils have been given enhanced responsibilities for homelessness since 2017 through the Homelessness Reduction Act and the pandemic initiatives such as 'Everyone In' has brought more focus to the issue. It has been reported to us that the stay on evictions given during the pandemic has created more staff capacity to work on longer lasting solutions to those needing temporary accommodation and for rough sleepers. The continuing government funding support has also encouraged some councils to register as RPs. In this survey, which is based on published council documents and associated material, council strategies were reviewed and searched for their position on affordable housing. Not all councils have a corporate plan, business plan or wider organisational strategy but the majority do. We have found that many of these have been reviewed and updated since 2020 in response to the pandemic whereas others were reviewed in 2019 as part of the usual political cycle. The review of each council corporate strategy found that of that 80% council had some indication of a priority for the provision of affordable housing in their areas. This did not necessarily extend to a consideration of how this should be provided by the council or other providers and nor did it necessarily state what the council intended to do about addressing this issue. However, those councils with a corporate strategy that included the need to prioritise affordable housing are shown on the table. Where there is no mention of the corporate strategy, this is either because the council did not have one or did not mention the provision of affordable housing as an issue. At the same time, of the councils that were in the 20% not mentioning the need to provide affordable housing at the corporate level, then a number of these have shown that they are active in the delivery of affordable housing.

The corporate strategies also indicated a closer operational relationship between the planning system and the provision of housing within the local authority area than has been apparent before. However, as discussed below, the corporate strategies together with the planning and housing initiatives mentioned by councils almost always excluded what the council is undertaking in providing housing through the means of regeneration. This is generally beyond housing estate regeneration and concerned with town centres, riverside areas, and redevelopment of sites formerly accommodating barracks and garrison.

Regeneration

In 2017 and 2019, there has been no specific consideration of the regeneration activities being undertaken by councils in their areas. However, in this research, the use of regeneration by local authorities to provide housing has emerged as being a widespread activity. This might be for a range of reasons such as need to improve a particular location or to take advantage of previously developed land for new purposes. The relationship which councils have with regeneration is longstanding and has been a key component of council place-based policy in the post-1947 period. In the past, this regeneration activity might have more commonly been undertaken through the use of site acquisition and assembly using compulsory purchase order and subsequent direct or indirect development using third parties. This has primarily been seen as a means of morning town centres, culture, employment and inward investment. Over time, councils have continued their regeneration initiatives through the establishment of specific teams, the use of planning tools, joint ventures and advocacy to Local Enterprise Partnerships or mayors of combined authorities for specific funding to open up areas through the provision of infrastructure investment or brown field site treatment and preparation. There have also been changes in the composition of the uses in these regeneration schemes with housing and student accommodation increasingly being provided as part of a wider mixed-use scheme.

In 2021, council-led regeneration schemes that provide some housing have been included in this survey and are shown as being distinct from the housing provided by councils through planning negotiations and housing programmes. What is interesting is that the regeneration programmes are generally separate from council corporate plans and seem seldom to appear in housing strategies or capital investment programmes. Yet, as the survey demonstrates, they are increasingly used as a mechanism to provide housing of a range of types and tenures. While the council may not be providing the homes directly, there is clearly considerable engagement in getting the homes delivered directly or with partners. Some of this housing is for social housing needs and in some cases local authorities are purchasing housing provided by the private sector. This means of providing housing through regeneration appears to be underreported and unrecognised yet in some cases the housing provision numbers are large. While local authorities may not own the whole of the regeneration site – or indeed any land in the designated area, it is using planning, other programmes and advocacy to bring the regeneration sites to fruition. The government's programmes to support town centres have seen this consolidated and, in some cases, apparently accelerated. It is interesting to note this additional strand of activity which is part of the council's programme in providing housing but at present is far less recognised.

Councils using Modern Methods of Construction

While the desk survey did not specifically ask a question about the council's use of modular or Modern Methods of Construction (MMC), a number of local authorities mentioned their use of these approaches which are listed in appendix A. In some cases, these are described as pilot schemes or where the council is investigating the use of MMC such as in BCP, Bracknell, Bradford, Redcar and Cleveland and Walsall Councils. Both Nottingham and Nottinghamshire are using MMC to provide housing using different approaches. Nuneaton and Bedworth have stated that they will be using MMC for some of their homes being developed through the HRA. Corby states that it is using MMC to deliver homes while Cornwall has long had a factory for windows and doors which is now extending its delivery to the council's company and private developers. Oxford has developed a procurement framework for MMC to provide 2500 homes across Oxfordshire. Coventry has a JV to pilot delivery through MMC while Greenwich and Kings Lynn and West Norfolk are using JVs for MMC to provide carbon neutral homes and Leeds is providing 28 homes through an MMC JV. Lewisham has been using the housing funding provided by the Mayor of London to build 65 MMC homes. In North Somerset, in a joint approach with Homes England for 500 homes, MMC is being used for an urban village extension together with passivhaus standards. In Medway, the councils' company MDC has commissioned 20 homes using MMC. Mendip council is using MMC to provide housing working with a Community Land Trust. The analysis of the direct survey in our forthcoming full report will have further information on the use of MMC by local authorities.

Councils providing student housing or working with Universities

One issue that has emerged in 2021 is the number of councils engaged in the provision of student accommodation. This might be for a range of reasons, for example in Milton Keynes where a second university campus is being developed and accommodation for 5000 students is being planned. Other councils are providing for existing student populations as in Nottingham (900 places) and Leeds (505 places). Some councils appear to be providing student accommodation in response to distributed campuses including Rushmoor (128 places), Scarborough (150 places) and Newcastle under Lyme (500 places). Some councils are working in partnership with universities for wider development and regeneration such as Newcastle upon Tyne and Peterborough, which is working with Anglia Ruskin University. The councils identified in the survey providing student housing are included in Appendix B.

Councils developing their own operational estate including civic centres

Some local authorities have mentioned the use of their own civic centres, council buildings and car parks to provide housing. In some cases, such as Plymouth this is being undertaken in conjunction with a developer. In Richmondshire the council's former premises are historic buildings and these have been converted to housing. Other councils redeveloping their own accommodation include Adur, Bromsgrove, Mid Suffolk, Trafford and Waltham Forest. A number of councils have also mentioned developing their car parks. This has been reflected in the Bournemouth case study in the 2017 research. In Peterborough, the council is demolishing a multi-storey car park, that has come to the end of its life, to use for housing and other councils mentioning this activity include Brentwood, Cheltenham, Oldham and Maidstone. The full list is in Appendix C.

Councils working with other public sector landowners

The development of housing through public sector landowners working together has been promoted by One Public Estate over a period of 15 years. These include Bedford, Derby, South Staffordshire and Torbay. In the desk survey a number of councils identified their inclusion in this programme while other councils mentioned working with specific public landowners such as the NHS in North Somerset and to redevelop former garrison or barracks sites including Richmondshire, Brighton and Hove, Folkestone and Hythe. In the case of some councils, these sites are being used to provide new garden villages such as in the Vale of White Horse. These councils are listed in appendix D.

Councils using passivhaus or higher environmental standards

During the course of the survey, a number of councils were identified as using higher environmental standards for their own development. These included the use of a range of terms including passivhaus, eco-friendly, net zero, carbon neutral and higher environmental standards. The Isle of Wight has an eco-hamlet. The councils mentioning the use of passivhaus standards for their own housing development include Broadland, Mendip, Wolverhampton and York among others. Some councils including BCP, Forest of Dean and Greenwich mention taking a carbon neutral or net zero approach and others such as Sheffield, Pendle and Sutton refer to using higher environmental standards. The councils mentioning the use of higher environmental standards in their developments are shown in Appendix E.

Numbers of homes being delivered through council engagement

As an examination of the local authority tables will demonstrate, the information available about different kinds of housing delivery are scattered across a Council's websites and through media reports of council meetings. Where there is information about the number of homes being provided, these are included in the table and should be seen as a mosaic, contributing to a wider picture but with many gaps. Although it is relatively straightforward to identify the budgets for new build housing within the HRA – through business plans, capital programmes or council budgets, these are far less frequently accompanied by a detailed list of specific developments. The same is the case where councils have companies and the totals included within the tables have frequently been obtained by adding together the number of homes on specific developments. There has been a conscious attempt to try to avoid double counting but some of this may have occurred inadvertently. It is also probable that this table is an under-recording of council delivery for these reasons. In some cases, councils are working directly with Housing Association partners through the management of s106 properties or through specific pots of funding for an agreed list of partners. For some councils this is their main means of delivery and appears to be effective in some locations. For others, like Cornwall, this partnership with HAs is one of a number of initiatives to provide housing. In some cases, much of the housing is being delivered through joint ventures with developers and it is assumed that the outcomes of these joint initiatives will be counted as market completions rather than reflecting the effort, resources and commitment that has been made by councils to achieve these developments, often, including of a high number of affordable homes.

While this table does not provide a comprehensive picture of the number of homes councils are directly engaged in delivering, it provides at least some indication of the scale, type and increasing activity across a range of delivery methods. The following sections give some reflections on the positions in London and the individual mayoral combined authorities. The regional analysis will be in the main report of the research.

Differences in the public funding of delivery of social and affordable homes in London and the rest of England

Public financial support for the delivery of housing in London differs from the rest of England. In London, this funding is devolved to the Mayor whereas in the rest of England it is operated through Homes England. In 2016, the Mayor of London decided that he would introduce two major initiatives to enable the delivery of social and affordable housing in London to support the capital's housing needs and economy. The first initiative was for councils that had not been able to use their right to buy receipts before the expiry of the deadline imposed by government. These receipts are often difficult to use, and we have found in the past that a significant proportion were not used to provide more housing due to the rules associated with their application and the ability of the council to find ways to use them in time. In England, these unused receipts are returned to the general pot of Homes England, whereas in London, they have been returned to the Mayor. This was an issue raised by this research in the 2019 report. In London, the Mayor decided that any unused receipts returned in this way would be held by him as in a 'bank' so that the boroughs could use them at a future date. This removed the pressures for quick use and allowed the receipts to be applied in the locations where they were raised. Since 2021, the government has announced a change in the timescales for the receipts to be lengthened and it is hoped that this will be more beneficial to local authorities although these changes have been associated with other rule changes that may be less advantageous.

The second, and more major, initiative undertaken by the Mayor of London was to use funds available to him to create a major housing fund into which each borough could bid, regardless of whether or not they had an HRA.<sup>2</sup> The Mayor invested £4.6bn in achieving 116,000 affordable homes by 2022. These bids required the boroughs to commit to completing an agreed number of homes within a set period. This was in a programme format rather than agreements for individual schemes. In addition to this funding, the Mayor recognised that the boroughs would need significant support in developing their skills and capacity. In order to support the boroughs, the mayor implemented a short term programme through the Future of London organisation which tackled a range of specific technical, planning and procurement issues in building at scale again. This was followed by a more developed programme of support. This approach was recommended for English local authorities through Homes England in the 2019 report of this research and in 2021, two specific initiatives were announced. The first was to offer local authorities the opportunity to become strategic partners with Homes England that would enable them to have a guaranteed programme of funding rather than have to seek approval on a scheme-by-scheme basis. The second was the establishment of a skills support programme to start in the summer of 2021 which includes assistance for all councils, support for those working directly with Homes England and thirdly bespoke support. While Homes England has a relationship management with each local authority, it is also acknowledged that the relationships between Homes England and local authorities can be scattered across the council, and these are not necessarily brought together in a single place inside either the council or Homes England.

Direct delivery of housing in London

The first point to notice in the survey tables for individual London Boroughs is the significant size of direct housing delivery outcomes in comparison with most to the rest of England. While London has severe land constraints across much of its area, all London Boroughs are now delivering. A higher percentage of councils in London retain their HRAs than in the rest of the country at 87% with one borough, Bromley, seeking to reopen their HRA for purposes of funding for temporary accommodation. The number of Boroughs with companies has always been higher than the rest of the country, starting at 78% in 2017 and rising to 87% in 2019. This figure has been maintained in 2021 although Merton has closed its company and Richmond has commenced a JV. 69% of Boroughs have at least one JV. The Croydon company is about to be sold to the private sector in the first move of this kind in England as far as we have been able to see.

In reviewing the numbers of homes included in direct delivery programmes, most London Boroughs have included more detail about their delivery than other local authorities. This may be because their programmes are larger, and this data is also distinguished by detail of delivery between various agencies of the council. For example, in Barnet a range of information is provided for the delivery through the HRA and arms of the Barnet group of companies. Borough HRA programmes also include significant numbers of homes as do homes provided through partnerships with housing associations – with 4000 ‘genuinely affordable homes' being mentioned by Brent of being delivered in this way. Ealing has a target of 2500 affordable homes to be built by 2022 and also has a JV with Hill on 22 small sites and is delivering 1300 affordable homes by 2026 through its company, Broadway Living, operating as an RP. Other boroughs such as Enfield and Greenwich have large programmes as part of their own development and working to deliver regeneration sites. Hackney and Kingston are undertaking major estate regeneration, with Hackney providing 500 homes at living rent. Hammersmith and Fulham and Waltham Forest are both councils redeveloping parts of their civic campus to provide more homes. Harrow is piloting 51 PRS homes and is undertaking a programme of 500 HRA homes to 2020. Havering is committed to delivering 3500 new homes including for affordable rent and low-cost home ownership with the land remaining within the council's ownership. Some councils, including Hillingdon and Redbridge are currently searching for JV partners for housing development. Hounslow also has high housing development numbers, and it is seeking 5000 affordable homes of which 3000 should be for social rent through the council or housing associations. Lambeth has a development programme of 4500 homes by 2026 of which 1196 will be affordable. Lewisham and Barking and Dagenham are providing housing for social rent levels outside the HRA on rolling tenancies. Some councils have specifically mentioned the importance and role of the funding made available by the Mayor including Sutton, Newham and Brent. In Southwark, the council has a pipeline of 5000 HRA homes of which 2500 are expected to be delivered by 2022. Some Boroughs have other forms of housing being delivered such as the co-living schemes in Wandsworth. In Westminster, its company Westminster Builds is developing 2000 homes.

Delivery in Mayoral Combined Authorities

The powers of each Mayor of a combined authority vary and are agreed by the constituent local authorities that make up the MCA. Unlike the Greater London Authority, the MCAs are not local authorities and the Mayors do not have their powers including those in the 2011 Localism Act to raise income. They are dependent for their funding on government through a range of growth deals and specific initiatives. None of the Mayors in MCAs have housing powers but the government has created a range of initiatives which have been made available to specific MCAs. The West Midlands MCA has a housing growth deal while this and the West of England MCA have specific funding to support the implementation of modern methods of construction. The MCAs in Teesside, Manchester and North of the Tyne have had specific funding to accelerate stalled sites into development. These funds are additional to those generally available through Homes England although some are administered through them. In most MCAs these are combined with the Local Enterprise Partnerships in some ways and these have also been significant in providing funding for infrastructure and construction sites. This is also the case outside the MCAs where LEPs have provided significant funds to unlock sites through funding of roads for example in Cheltenham.

1. Cambridge and Peterborough MCA

This MCA has seven local authorities in membership. All seven had companies in 2021 and six in 2017 and 2019. Four councils had JVs and two had HRAs and both of these are below the national averages. A number of the MCA member councils are active in delivering housing. Cambridge is seeking to provide 546 affordable homes in the HRA by 2023, some of which have been funded through an MCA devolution grant for housing. The council is also proposing to develop 5000 homes on land that it in part owns. In Peterborough, the council also has a number of JVs and is also reviewing all car park sites with a view to their development. One multistorey car park is being redeveloped for housing. The MCA find has also supported 40 affordable homes in Fenland and 670 homes in East Cambridgeshire which is also working with the Community Land Trust. East Cambridgeshire has regeneration programmes in each of its market towns and sites north of Ely for 5000 homes. Huntingdon is regenerating St Neots with funds for housing from the MCA. South Cambridgeshire is adding to its stock of HRA homes, and its South Cambridgeshire Investment Partnership is building both for PRS and the HRA and the councils and its companies are acquiring land. Cambridgeshire County Council has a housing company This Land which is developing on a number of sites across the county including 350 homes in Newmarket.

2. Liverpool City Region MCA

Liverpool City Region has six constituent authorities. Of these, all had companies in 2021 and although the Liverpool City Council Company was closed in 2021 it has a JV. Similarly, five have JVs but only one has an HRA. St Helen's states that it is supporting the delivery of housing, but it was difficult to identify any numbers. Sefton is establishing an RP in 2021 and the others have a strong focus on regeneration including Knowsley, Halton and the Wirral.

3. Greater Manchester MCA

There are ten metropolitan boroughs in Greater Manchester and all have companies and JVs. This compares with 8 in 2019 and 7 in 2017. Of the 10 councils, 8 have an HRA which is above the English average. Like London, some of these councils have high delivery numbers through a range of means including regeneration. Wigan is delivering 728 homes in partnership with RPs and building nearly 300 HRA homes between 2020-2021. Trafford had three JVs including one for the regeneration of its civic quarter. In addition to providing its own new homes, Stockport is focusing on bringing 1,000 vacant homes back into use. Tameside has a partnership with Homes England to provide affordable homes. Stockport and Tameside have garden villages. Oldham is delivering new homes through a PFI while Rochdale has a JV partnership with Hive Homes to deliver 7000 new homes around five stations. Salford is working with the English Cities Fund to provide 2500 homes in addition to its own programme. Bury has a JV with Muse for regeneration of its town centre which includes a number of homes while it is also delivering through its ALMO. Bolton is undertaking some regeneration but its major development site across the border with Wigan is in limbo awaiting infrastructure investment to open up the land. Manchester is committed to providing 2025 affordable homes 2019-2025 through a variety of means. It has a partnership arrangement with HAs to deliver housing on its own land it is also receiving support from Homes England for affordable homes.

4. North of the Tyne MCA

The three authorities in the North of the Tyne MCA have had companies since 2017 which is above the national average and 2 have JVs which is below the national average. All three have an HRA. Newcastle upon Tyne has a JV with Newcastle University and a second JV for 1800 homes. North Tyneside is undertaking a range of housing delivery approaches including using the HRA and its own trading company NTTC. It is particularly focused on providing affordable homes through these means and partnerships with HAs. It is also progressing the delivery of housing through regeneration. Northumberland is committed to providing 1000 affordable homes through the HRA and its company Ascent is building 256 homes for sale and affordable tenures.

5. South Yorkshire MCA

South Yorkshire MCA comprises four metropolitan boroughs and in 2021 all four had HRAs, companies and JVs which are all above the national average. Doncaster developed 407 council homes in the HRA 2015-2020 and has a commitment to a further £100m investment but there is no development programme to set out how his funding is to be used as yet. Barnsley has purchased 250 vacant homes to bring them back into use. Sheffield has JVs with Keepmoat and Great Places for 2300 homes on a 60ha brownfield site of which 1000 have been completed and has a target of for 3100 new homes in the HRA between 2020-2028/9. Rotherham has a number of JVs and is working with Wates its own sites. It has received Homes England grant for 227 homes and has reviewed the land that it holds in the HRA. It is also promoting a range of housing on town centre regeneration sites.

6. Teesside MCA

The Teesside MCA comprises five councils. Of these 2 have an HRA including Hartlepool which reopened its HRA when it exceeded the 200 limit in the council's ownership. Councils have 4 or 80% companies and JVs in 2021 which was the same figure in 2019 with one company in 2017. Stockton and Redcar and Cleveland have homes being delivered with support from Homes England. Redcar and Cleveland Council is keen to expand its use of MMC. Some councils have major urban extensions for garden villages such as Darlington and Stockton. All councils, apart from Stockton, mention that are providing affordable homes. Middlesbrough and Darlington both have two JVs to deliver housing.

7. West of England MCA

In the West of England MCA, all three councils have JV companies while Bath and NE Somerset (BANES) has a trading group of companies. South Gloucestershire Council is also delivering with BANES. North Somerset council is not part of the MCA but does work collaboratively with it on issues such as transport and housing. Bristol has three JV companies in addition to its own company, Goram Homes and these JVs while the council has 640 homes in the HRA pipeline on 14 sites and a range of regeneration sites for new housing. BANES has a number of investment properties, and its company ADL is purchasing land.

8. West Midlands MCA

The West Midlands MCA is comprised of 7 authorities, of which 5 have companies and JVs in 2021. There are also five with HRAs and at 70% - this is higher than the national average but lower for JVs. The area had 4 or 57% companies in 2017 and 2019. Some of the constituent MBs are more active than others in housing provision. Walsall and Dudley appear to be the least active although it was difficult to identify many numbers of homes provided for Dudley. Of the other MBs, Birmingham and Wolverhampton are the most active in direct provision through the HRA and associated delivery mechanisms while Solihull appears to be primarily dependent on regeneration projects. Coventry has a small modular pilot.

9. West Yorkshire MCA

West Yorkshire MCA is the most recently established and had its first mayoral election in 2021. It comprises five West Yorkshire MBs together with York UA. In 2021, all six councils had a company as they did in 2019 and 4 in 2017. At 100% this is higher than the national average. Four of the authorities had JVs, which is less than the national average and four had HRAs which is more than the national average. When considering the individual councils, then Calderdale appears to be the least active with 38 homes in the council's company Weave and 100 affordable homes being developed in partnership with the Together Housing group. Other councils are committed to higher delivery members including Kirklees which is supporting 1,000 new homes on council land by 2024. Bradford and Leeds are active in investigating MMC for housing delivery and Leeds is working with Clarion on a mixed scheme that includes student accommodation. It also has a major HRA programme of 300 homes pa. Wakefield is aspiring to build 124 homes and promoting regeneration. York has a significant housing programme using its one company Shape Homes and delivering community build homes through Yorspace. It is also redeveloping barracks and has a JV for York Central.

Delivery in CAMKOX

The CAMKOX area comprises 19 local authorities of which two are newly formed in 2021 – North Northamptonshire and West Northamptonshire. While neither have much information available about their housing activity as yet, both have formed RPs as one of their first acts. Of this councils, five have HRAs which is a smaller percentage than other parts of the country. Of the 19 authorities, 13 or 69% had companies in 2021 and 11 or 58% had JVs. All of these figures are below the national average. In addition to the levels of activity shown within the Cambridge and Peterborough MCA, Oxford, Central Bedford and Milton Keynes are the most active authorities with the latter expecting to deliver 500 new homes in their HRA by 2022. The council is also providing 200 energy efficient homes within the HRA and has a company where 2,000 homes are programmed. Oxford City council has a number of JVs with different partners, including one through Barton Homes for 885 new homes which will include 354 owned by Oxford City Housing Limited (OCHL) and be offered to those on the council's housing waiting list. Central Bedford has identified the potential for 585 homes on council land for development by its company of which 220 (40%) will be affordable.

Conclusions

There are a number of conclusions that can be drawn from this desk survey that will contribute to the report of the whole third round research. However, some of them can be summarised here:

1. Councils are continuing to diversify the way in which they are providing housing;
2. Councils are using JVs to support delivery more than in the past and there are increasing numbers of councils that are using a range of JVs each to support a specific project;
3. There is some evidence of a growing ambition to provide homes through the HRA in some councils as evidenced here, although this is by no means universal;
4. There is evidence that councils are more systematically reviewing their own land holdings and using them as a means of providing more homes;
5. The different funding system for London Boroughs means that all councils are providing homes and at numbers larger than elsewhere;
6. A number of councils have strong delivery arrangements with local Housing Associations;
7. While it is not possible to aggregate the total number of homes that councils are providing, the information in this table demonstrates that the numbers of homes being provided by councils is continuing to grow each year;
8. The pandemic has encouraged a large proportion of councils to review their corporate plans and strategies and it is noticeable, that overall, 80% of councils are identifying their need to deliver affordable housing. This is across the country, all types of council and within councils of all political control. Where councils are acknowledging this need, they are not necessarily putting in place actions to help to meet this shortfall. Where councils have not identified affordable housing in their corporate strategies, they are nevertheless taking steps to provide affordable housing;
9. The failure of councils to claim the homes that are being delivered through their investment including regeneration is leading to a general underreporting of their housing delivery activity to their local communities, the government and the wider commentariat; and
10. Some councils are mentioning their use of MMC or passivhaus/ higher environmental standards
